

Leaving a Comment on Each Web Page of the History of Desktop Publishing Site

Directions:

Visit each page of the History of Desktop Publishing Site. At the bottom of each page there is an option to leave a comment. You are required to leave a comment at the bottom of each page (to leave a comment you must be logged into your Google account.) Each comment you leave must include: one positive aspect about the group's page in terms of design and one fact which you learned about their time frame (the most interesting element which you learned.)

Example Comment #1: I like how you created your own image collages for the personal section, and I was surprised the Line-0-Type era lasted for almost a hundred years.

Example Comment #2: Really detailed project, the bullets helped divide the facts making it easier to understand. I didn't realize that the Cold Type came out in the 1940s but wasn't popular until the 70's.
